MANUFACTURERS OF LAP WELDED
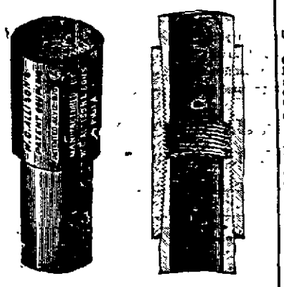
Tubing & Casing
Both Plain and Galvanized, for Oil and Salt Wells, American Charcoal Iron Boiler Tubes, Lap Welded Tubing for Steam and Water.



SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF
W. C. ALLISON'S
PATENT JOINT
Oil Well Tubing.
This Superior Tubing is furnished with heavy sockets, and is cut with a vanishing screw thread, corresponding exactly with the thread in the socket, so that when screwed up it has a bearing the whole length of the joint; and the absence of a deep thread on the tube at the end of the socket obviates the liability to break at that point from the vibration caused by the action of the pump.
Each length and socket is stamped with our trade mark, and is carefully tested before shipment with a hydraulic pressure of 1,200 pounds to the square inch.

Each joint carefully inspected, reamed at end, and proved with the sockets on at a hydraulic pressure of 1,200 pounds to the square inch before shipment.

Angling.

From the Turf, Field and Farm.

Shakspeare observes that "a man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a King; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm;" but the modern disciple of Isaac Walton would disdain such unscientific sport as the use of bait, even though it had partaken of a royal carcass. The art of catching fish is one of the oldest in the world, and was practiced by the earliest navigators of antiquity, the Phœnicians, on the coast of Spain. Plutarch relates how Mark Antony and Cleopatra amused themselves by angling in the river Nile, when the former, being unsuccessful, caused divers to secretly attach fish, which had been caught, to his hook. So universal has been this pursuit that the proverbs of every nation abound with frequent allusions to fishing. With the Turks there is a consoling motto that "every fish that escapes appears greater than it is,' while the French have a polite saying to encourage the unlucky, that "a fisherman may let an eel slip from him." "There is no catching trout with dry breeches" is a Portuguese proverb of more truth than poetry. The prudent Dutch exclaim "cry no herring till you have it in the net," and the wary Scotch, with characteristic caution, advise "gut nae fish till ye get them."

Naturalists have of late years devoted much attention to the study of the habits of the finny tribe, and recent researches have thrown considerable light upon this subject. Pliny describes ninety-four species of fish, Linnæus classified them into four hundred and seventy-eight kinds; but at present the number has swelled to upwards of thirteen thousand varieties, of which about one-tenth belong to fresh water. "The fields and forests of our dry land," says Darwin, "appear sterile and empty, if we compare them with those of the sea."

The popular belief that these creatures are sometimes attracted by musical sounds or that they can be made to obey the call of the human voice, is erroneous. Although not entirely deprived of the sense of hearing, they are only sensible in a slight degree of noise. Any one who is familiar with them must have noticed that in walking along the banks of a stream the fish are frequently startled and alarmed by the vibration of the footsteps, yet if he stands still and keeps out of sight they will often remain motionless, despite loud talking or whistling. But if destitute of the faculty of distinguishing sounds, they are gifted with an active sense of smell, as has been satisfactorily proved by experiments with perfumed food. Anglers have taken advantage of this fact to attract fish by tempting their olfactory nerve with odorific bait. Fish are so prolific that it is estimated the sea would soon become solid with them were it not for the fact of their preying upon each other; yet notwithstanding their fecundity, the indiscriminate slaughter of them of all seasons has almost emptied many rivers of their game, which only a few years since were teeming with the choicest specimens. The English, who have always taken a lively interest in all kinds of field sports, have made the most judicious legislative enactments to encourage the culture and propagation of fish, by prohibiting not only fishing out of season, and the use of unlawful implements for their wholesale destruction, but even preventing the erection of any barriers in the rivers, that would interfere with their migration to and from the sea.

As a table luxury or for the pleasure of capturing them, the salmon group are the most highly prized. This family include the sea salmon, the sea, lake and brook of speckled trout, and constitute the veritable game fish, although the striped, black and rock bass, the pike, perch, carp and others are much sought by anglers. "The trout," says Isaac Walton, "is a right generous fish, feeding cleanly and purely in the swiftest streams and on the hardest gravel," and few will deny the preference to the veteran angler's favorite. As regards the daintiness of this fish, there is some question, as it has been known to devour almost everything at times, including his own relations. There seems to be, however, more or less mystery concerning the diet of the fish, and the laws which regulate their time of feeding are as yet undiscovered. Experienced anglers will remember how often the most tempting bait or attractive fly has failed to secure a nibble at one time in the day, when, perhaps, a few hours before or after, the fish were voracious.

The various sciences—zoology, entomology, botany and chemistry—have contributed towards the perfection of this sport; artificial flies, ingeniously contrived to counterfeit insects, lines of hair and silk, finely-balanced rods from carefully selected and seasoned wood, with reels of delicate mechanism, form the implements of the modern angler, besides an infinite variety of tackle, equibs, sinkers and like appliances. Armed with such fishing-gear, and accoutred with the water-proof habiliments of the times, a skillful sportsman is certain of returning home successful, and without having been subjected to many personal discomforts. Yet a novice in the craft, even with the most complete equipments, is apt to meet with the same experience as narrated by Washington Irving: "After watching and toiling and creeping about for the greater part of a day, with scarcely any success, in spite of our admirable apparatus, a lubberly country urchin came down from the hills with a rod made from the branch of a tree, a few yards of twine, and, as Heaven shall help me, I believe a crooked pin for a hook, baited with a vile earth worm, and in half an hour caught more fish than we had nibbles throughout the day."

This pastime is so intimately associated with the most picturesque and romantic rural scenery that it has been the favorite theme of poets, and awakened interest among those unacquainted with the pleasures of fishing. Aside from the physical effects of this amusement that are remarkably beneficial, on account of the exercise and invigorating influence of the pure air over the running streams, there is an additional charm in the recreation it affords the mind and the contentedness, which is naturally produced by the tranquility of the pursuit and the quiet of the surroundings. The piscatorian finds more diversity and variation of amusement in the infinite variety of his game than is offered by any other field sport:

"The carp, with golden scales, in wanton play;
The trout, in crimson speckled glory gay;
The red finned roach the silver-coated eel;
The pike whose haunt the twisted roots conceal,
The healing tench, the gudgeon, perch."

This country abounds with more fresh water fish than Europe, and combines all the advantages for catching them. It is to be hoped that these opportunities will not be neglected, and that angling will soon become so popular and general that we shall rival our trans-Atlantic neighbors.

Courtship and Marriage in Holland

From London Society.

Is it possible that even the young of these sober-minded people fall in love? Young people do fall in love in their customary manner, and the swain makes his offer without any intermediary assistance. A marriage of convenience is an unheard of thing. Consent of parents, however, is necessary, for without it the marriage of persons, even up to the age of thirty, may be declared null and void; but any one who is more than twenty-one has a legal means of bringing a recalcitrant parent to reason. When all that delightful private arrangement has been made, and consent of parents obtained, the engagement soon gets abroad, and the young couple have to go in company to make calls upon his friends and her friends. The proverbial slip 'twixt cup and lip is not unknown in Holland as elsewhere; nevertheless, this system of making formal engaged calls certainly does tend to prevent a rupture upon slight grounds; for it is a matter of no small embarrassment to call upon the same people a second time and ceremoniously introduce sweetheart number two. It is held to be a part of a lovers' duties to accompany his mistress to parties and balls, and also his right and pleasure to take her to the theaters and concerts unaccompanied by a chaperone, but he is seldom asked to pay a visit in the same house with her for more than the day. Lovers always choose the house and buy the furniture together during the courtship. When the time comes the two go together alone to the town hall for the "santeekening" or betrothal. This is merely a public notice of the intention to marry, and is given in writing. The notice is then put into a kind of box, protected by a brass wire, and placed for some time in a conspicuous part of the hall. Banns are also published in church. A runaway match is held to be thoroughly disgraceful, is accomplished with difficulty, and seldom attempted. Friends now, in place of wedding cards, receive by post a lithographed document, announcing santeekening. On the first Sunday afternoon subsequent to this, bruid and bruidgom, who are thus called in the interval between the santeekening and the wedding day, hold a grand reception in the drawing-room of the father of the bruid. A sofa, sometimes gaily decorated with flowers and evergreens, being occupied by the two, the bruid's relations range themselves at his right hand, the bruidgom's at her. The bruid wears her wedding dress, veil and orange wreath on this occasion, and the company generally are in gala costume. Visitors then, when announced, march up between the two opposite lines of relations and make pretty speeches to the happy pair; and, after having entrusted themselves for a short time to the care of the bruidsmeisjes, who, dressed for the occasion, show the presents placed on a table at the other end of the room, and offer hippocras and sweets called "bruidsmuiters," and cake, make a rapid departure, and are succeeded by others. The wedding commonly takes place on the Thursday week after reception Sunday, and during the interval balls and parties are given in honor of the young couple. On the appointed day the wedding party, bruid and bruidgom going alone in the first carriage, move first for the town hall. The burgomaster marries them, makes a little speech, and receives their signatures; to all this there must be four witnesses. Then to church in the same order. The party having assembled in a sort of vestry, the bruidgom gives his right arm to the bruid, and leads the way to the chancel (reserved now-a-days for marriages only,) or to the body of the church in front of the pulpit. Here the pair seat themselves upon a central sofa, and relatives range themselves as at the santeekening reception. The ceremony is simple, the couple being already married. After a hymn has been sung they merely have to acknowledge the fact of marriage in answer to the clergyman, and, having advanced to two kneeling chairs, ready placed a few steps in front, receive a blessing from him and a short exhortation. No ring is used, but one is sometimes worn subsequently. The new husband then gives his left arm to his wife and leads the way home again. The wedding breakfast is a small affair, attended by the very near relations only.

House Furnishing.

THE NEWEST STYLES OF FURNITURE—CURTAINS AND CARPETS AND WHAT THEY COST—HINTS FOR NEW BEGINNERS.

From the New York Evening Mail.

In furnishing a hall the stand where visitors may find a temporary resting-place for hats, umbrellas, etc, is the most important consideration. In price they range from five or six hundred dollars downward. A very handsome one has a large mirror, richly framed in walnut and gilt, a marble pedestal on either side, surmounted by an urn—price, three hundred and fifty dollars. They are made, of course, in various styles, some handsome ones having on the pedestal, in place of an urn, a bronze figure. The degree of richness consists in the size of the mirror and the quality of the frame-work. On either side of the mirror are the hooks for hanging articles, but these are not many, as, in the case of a large gathering of company, some other place is provided for the purpose.

NEW PARLOR STYLES.

In parlor furniture an elegant set is the Duchesse, consisting of a sofa, two arm chairs, and two low-seated chairs; another, the Victoria or rose pattern, the most marked feature of this being a medallion-shaped puffing in the centre of the back of chairs and sofa. A favorite style in furniture now is the covering of one color, and the puffing around it of another; colors contrasting well with each other being, of course, selected. Rosewood and gilt are considered handsome, but rich walnut, inlaid with French walnut, colored woods and bronze, is considered elegant.

CABINETS.

In furnishing parlors the cabinet has entirely replaced the etagere, and to their manufacture great attention is given, in order that a rich and tasteful variety may be rendered from which to choose. A neat one may be had for two hundred and fifty dollars, the prices ranging from that up to three thousand dollars. The handsomest are very elaborate, a mass of rosewood, bronze, gilt, dyed woods and fine colored paintings on porcelain.

MIRRORS AND FIRE-SCREENS.

Another elegant article of furniture for a parlor is the mirror surrounded by an elaborate frame-work; this being intended to replace the mantel piece where there is no grate. A handsome one may be had for $1,500. Fire screens—the frame-work entirely of gilt, mounted in plate glass, embossed in the centre—are shown for $250. A handsomely inlaid table is $900.

DINING AND BEDROOM FURNITURE.

In dining-room furniture the buffet is, of course, the article that shows most, and to which, therefore, most attention is given. This ranges in price from $75 to $1,000 or more. One of walnut inlaid with French walnut, a fine slab of German marble, and handsome mirror, may be had for $500. An elegant set of bedroom furniture made of silvered maple and gilt—a canopy lined with blue damask above—is valued at $3,500. Elegant sets in walnut, inlaid with French walnut and gilt, are shown. The backs of bedsteads are not so high as they have been, the very high headboards not being seen. Bureaus are low-topped.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.

Certain styles in furniture may be called positive, inasmuch as they are not likely to change. Such are the Grecian and Gothics, though most of the styles do not, perhaps, come under any special classification, being made to suit the fancy of customers. Between the style of the house and its furniture there should always be a correspondence. If the house be Gothic the furniture should be Gothic. The Louis the Fourteenth and Louis the Sixteenth are positive styles. Styles are often termed Louis the Fourteenth and Louis the Sixteenth without any reason at all. The canopied bedstead is in the style of Louis the Sixteenth.

The purest white marble for furniture is brought from Vermont, and previously to being polished is often dyed in imitation of the rich colored German and Spanish marbles, and so successfully that the difference can scarcely be told. In price, however, the difference is great, the imitation costing a dollar and a half per foot, while the real amounts to five dollars.

Furniture, of course, changes slowly, compared to many other things. A gentleman of wealth furnishes a new dwelling in elegant style. He expects it to remain for twenty-five, thirty or forty years. In details, however, there are changes every year, while for consecutive years the general appearance may be similar. Comfort and convenience are much studied now.

CARPETINGS.

Curtains and carpetings should of course correspond with the furniture. Elegant imported carpets are styled the Aubusson, and are made in a town of France bearing that name. The handsomest costs twenty-five dollars a yard, though Aubusson carpeting may be obtained at fifteen dollars a yard. As a large parlor would require about fifty yards, the cost of a fine carpet of this description would be $1,250. The colors are never bright, and to the uninitiated appear faded. They last, however, and light up beautifully at night. Eastern figures are very noticeable in some of these patterns, and occasionally the ceiling above is frescoed to match, while coverings in similar designs for chairs and sofas are woven in patterns matching also. On many of the most elegant pieces of furniture, frescoing and carpeting, the Egyptian heads are seen. To these, however, some persons object.

The African Diamond Field.

DISCOURAGING REPORTS FROM AN UNSUCCESSFUL SEARCHER—THOUSANDS UNLUCKY, A FEW FORTUNATE.

Private Correspondence of the Alta Californian.

If you knew the hardships and troubles of a trip to these regions, and the life of a digger when he gets here, you would readily excuse him for any shortcomings. To give you a proper description, or anything like it, of what I have undergone from the time I started for the diamond fields up to this day, would require a more able hand than mine, and more space than an ordinary letter affords. I will only give you the outlines, and defer the details till the time when we shall meet again. We purchased a large cart and ten oxen, laid in a supply of provisions for six months, and then started for the El Dorado. The distance is over five hundred miles, the roads in general bad, and the country very hilly half the distance and very thinly settled. We crossed high mountains and stony-bedded rivers, some of which were extra high on the occasion; then again we traveled waterless plains, where man as well as beast suffered for the want of water, and many other things too numerous to mention, which contributed to our miserable existence. All this lasted six weeks, at the end of which time we arrived at our destination, Pniel.

The diggings are situated at different points along both sides of the River Vaal, a pretty good sized stream, though not navigable. This place, Pniel, has proved the richest of all that have been discovered as yet. The diggings being small they were all taken up before our arrival, and we were unable to obtain a claim except at a high price, and chances to purchase were seldom offered. About the time of our arrival a new rush was started on the other side of the river. We JEFFERSON DAVIS has been muzzled—for the present at least. Whether the democratic magnates have labored with him, or whether native sagacity has convinced him that he should keep quiet, does not appear; but he definitely announces his purpose to speak no more in public till better day dawns. He was invited a few weeks ago to deliver an oration or a lecture before a society in Mobile, and on the 23d ultimo, wrote from Memphis declining the opportunity. He said: "It clearly would not be difficult, with the freedom you allow in the selection of a subject, to avoid any expression which would fairly be used to the injury of any of others friends, but it would hardly be possible, under existing circumstances, to prevent my words from being abused for such a purpose." He adds in conclusion that he hopefully looks forward to the better days when such restraints shall no longer exist." It is not quite clear what the man means by this remark; if there is anything sensible and patriotic to say there is no reason in the world why he should hide his counsel. But if he continues in the faith he had when he recently spoke in Georgia and Alabama, there is no occasion for him to appear again, and it will be the prudent part for him to stay in retirement till he experiences a radical change of heart.

The Great Cancer Cure.

Andurango does not seem to have done itself to be a humbug in the case of Mrs. Mathewe, the mother of Vice President Colfax, who has been suffering from cancer for some time—no matter what it may have done in other cases. To a friend of his in Baltimore, Mr. Colfax writes as follows:

I am glad to be able to tell you that my mother is on the high road, apparently, to perfect cure, although she has only taken quarter doses of cundurango in consequence of its scarcity. When we left Washington in April, her case was absolutely hopeless, the cancer growing fearfully and angrily. Now the tumor is three-fourths gone and apparently diminishing. The pain is almost gone, and every symptom is favorable. Since the beginning of fortnight she has had only quarter dose, and now has none. She is more like herself than she has been for years. Whether it cures, or affects cancer, I cannot imagine. I know how incredulous many doctors are about it, and I would be, too, if I had not seen its results. It seems to depurate from the blood whatever it is that causes the cancer, and I don't know what else is any more than I know why Peruvian bark cures ague. You can tell your friends, however, when they obtain it they will notice on the fourth day improvement, and the ninth day will see themselves that the cancer is going away, that I let acts with them as with the cases we have seen. I'm longing for its arrival, and glad that Dr. Bliss so promptly sent his partner to that distant region for it. I have most piteous appeals for it from friends offering hundreds for it if it will only stop the growth of this terrible disease, but I have not an iota, and I guess none in the United States is now used up.

This cundurango, about which so much is being said, and which was for a while the hope of so many of the victims of cancer as a drug said to be derived from a plant which grows on the highest peaks of the Andes in one of the districts of Ecuador. It is very difficult to obtain, owing partly to the scarcity and partly to the unfriendly character of the Indians inhabiting the district and the dangers attending the ascent and descent of the mountains. A Washington physician has gone there to join in a supply of the drug, but he reports that of the many orders recently received from the United States and from Europe none have yet been filled.

LOOK OUT FOR METEORS.—Those who are skilled in signs among the stars predict a brilliant display of meteors during the latter part of this month. Of course such prophecy cannot fail for Biot, who was all about it, has made the computation, and has based his prediction on the best Chinese observations, which calculated that a maximum display of these other little bodies would take place about this time. It is a curious fact in human history that these astronomers of the "Long Ago" should have predicted events which our modern eyes will behold and verify. It is announced that the meteors will be most numerous between the 26th and 30th. Let everybody watch the skies, and note of the grand battle of the tiny combatants among the stars, and see if the keen Chinese eyes, for long centuries dead and dead, could really discover the events of the far-off future.

Steamer Burned.

CHICAGO, July 19.

At about ten o'clock last night the steamer Joseph Barber, running between this port and St. Joseph, Michigan, left the latter port with a cargo of fruit. At midnight, when about thirty-five miles from St. Joseph, the Barber was discovered to be on fire, and in a few minutes was completely enveloped in flames. The panic was dreadful. All but the working crew were in their berths, and they rushed out almost entirely destitute of clothing, as is usual at such times. Every available portable object was seized and thrown overboard and occupied by the frightened fugitives. There happened to be a small raft upon the upper deck which was taken by a few of the crew who got upon it, while those possessed of cool heads loosed the boats and got into them. As soon as the boats struck the water, those who had jumped overboard took to them, and for a time it was feared all would be swamped. The vessel burned like a tinder box, the lurid flame lighting up the heavens for miles around. About an hour before the Barbour went down the steamer Corrona, attracted by the flames from the blazing vessel, bore down upon her and picked up some eighteen persons, and the propellor Van Hoslet came along about the same time and saved twelve others. Two persons only were missing, a deck hand and a watchman. The cargo consisted of fruit, and all was lost. The Joseph Barbour was a second class boat, valued at $20,000, with an insurance of $7,000. She was owned by Mr. Chapman, and commanded by James Snow. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Reunion of the Army of the James.

NEW YORK, July 19.

The second triannual reunion of the Army of the James, took place at Appolo Hall to-day. Representatives of the various corps, the Tenth, Twelfth, Twenty-fourth, and Twenty-fifth, which comprised the Army of the James, were very large. Among them were Captain Thomas, Generals Devins, Carleton, Stewart, of New Jersey, Hinks, Duncan, and Sorrell, Major Lockwood, Captain Howell, General Vodges, Major Bassalburg, General Alden, of Troy, Major Sawyer, Colonels Peel, McDonald, McKay, Davenport, Lawrence, and Major Balard. The following dispatch was received by Captain John H. Howell, from General Horace Porter:

I regret that the President nor I will be able to attend the meeting of the Army of the James on account of other engagements. [Signed,] HORACE PORTER.

The business of the reunion was begun by an address of welcome by General Devins. In it he referred to the distinguished service of the Army of the James in crushing the rebellion. Chaplain Thomas delivered a prayer for the peace and prosperity of the whole country. In the absence of General Terry, Major General Duncan delivered the oration, which consisted of the reviewal of the record of the Army of the James.

The following poem was composed and read by John Hay:

THE ADVANCE GUARD.

In the dream of the Northern poets, the brave who in battle die,
Fight on in the shadowy phalanx, in the field of the upper sky;
And as we read the sounding rhyme, the reverent fancy hears
The ghostly ring of the viewless swords and the clash of the spectral spears.

We think with imperious questionings of the brothers that we lost,
And we strive to track in death's mystery the flight of each valiant ghost.
The Northern myths comes back to us, and we feel through our sorrow's night
That those young souls are striving still somewhere for truth and light.

It was not their limit for rest and sleep—their hearts beat high and strong.
In their fresh veins the blood of youth was singing its hot sweet song.
The open heaven bent over them, and flowers their light feet trod—
Their lives lay buried in light and blest by the smiles of women and God.

Again they come, again I hear the tread of that goodly band,—
I know the flash of his sword-like eye, and the grasp of his hard, warm hand;
And Putnam, and Shaw, of the lion heart and an eye like a Boston girl's—
And I see the light of the heaven which shone on Ulrich Dahlgren's curls.

There is no power in the gloom of hell to quench those spirits' fire—
There is no charm in the bliss of heaven to bid them not aspire.
But some who were in the eternal place that strength—that life servi e,
And like the dies on Lookout's crest, above death's cloud they strive.

A chosen corps, they are marching on in a wider field than ours;
Those bright battalions still fulfill the scheme of heavenly powers.
And high, brave thoughts float down to us the echoes of that far fight,
Like the flash of a distant picket's gun through the shades of the severing night.

No fear for them in our lower field—let us toil with arms unstained,
That at last we be worthy to stand with them on the shining heights they've gained.
We shall meet and greet in closing ranks in life's declining sun,
When the bugles of God shall sound recall, and the battle of life be won.

The Army of the James Society to-day elected the following officers: President, Major General Joseph Rawley, of Connecticut; Vice Presidents, Brevet Major General Chas. Howell; Treasurer, Brevet Brigadier General Jas. A. Carlton, of New York; Chaplain, Rev. Taylor; Orator at next meeting, Brevet Major General Thos. O. Osborn, of Illinois.

General News.

A Times special correspondent writes as follows in regard to the Tichborne case: Who the claimant is the information I gave you will be the first publication of the paradoxical fact that the claimant is both Tichborne and Orton. Solving mystery, I proceed to a solution. When Tichborne left England for South America his uncle, Sir James Doughty, was in possession of the Tichborne estates. He dying childless, the title and estates fell to claimant's father, who also dying his eldest son, Roger C., would inherit, had he survived. As it was believed that Roger perished in 1853 in the shipwreck of the ship Bella, in which he unquestionably sailed from Rio to New York, his brother, Alfred, succeeded, and he dying at the age of 26 years, left an infant who, had not claimant appeared, would unobstructedly on arriving at a legal age, have assumed the title and proprietorship of the estates. These facts are not new to you, but this one is, that claimant's father had an illegitimate child by his cook, Mary Orton, sister to old George Orton, who defence say was claimant's father, and by whom claimant, under the name of Arthur Orton, was brought up. The boy was ignorant of his true parentage, and after many strange vicissitudes settled in Australia, where he was found in 1866, under the name of Tom Castro, pursuing the calling of his father, a butcher. The old lady was erratic and unsound in mind, and though years had transpired without tidings from the long lost son, she was monomanial on the subject and not disparing, and has continued to advertise and offer rewards. There was in the family of the Tichborne's a negro named Bogle, who perhaps alone was in the secret of the natural son of claimant's father, who would be a half brother to the real Roger, and like a cunning old negro as he is, went off quietly to Sydney, and there finding Tom Castro alias Arthur, told him the secret of his parentage, and the situation of the titles and estates. Tichborne, with this revelation of the mystery, disappears, for from Bogle and Lady Tichborne, who was easily persuaded to recognize claimant as her own son, the claimant acquired his knowledge and history of the real Roger after his sixteenth year, from which time he resided in England, when Bogle and other servants of the family knew but little of Roger's boyhood in France. We have an explanation of the fact that claimant's evidence as to his history prior to his sixteenth year is so lame and so unsatisfactory, and it is rumored that the defence is so alarmed at the strength of plaintiff's case, disclosed on cross examination, that they will on the reassembling of the court shift their grounds and attempt to defeat claimant as the natural son of Sir James Tichborne.

Dr. Alvah Blaisdell, the well-known distiller, convicted some time ago in the U. S. The War Department has addressed a letter to the Commanding General of the Department of the Missouri, stating that the President directs that so far as the resources of the General permit, assistance shall be given in provisions and transportation and military protection to Vincent Collier, Indian Agent, in endeavoring to collect the Indians of New Mexico and Arizonia upon a reservation at Canada Alamosa, and also that such Indians may be induced to come in both on the way and after their arrival at the reservation. The session of the Ku Klux Investigation Committee was occupied with the examination of Colonel Huggins, who served in the Federal army from Ohio during the war and was afterwards agent for the Freedman's Bureau in Mississippi for eighteen months and is now United States Assessor at Aberdeen, Mississippi. He testified that while on an official tour, in the vicinity of Aberdeen, last March, he was captured by a band of about 120 disguised men who, after making him promise, under threats of death, to leave the country and State within ten days, whipped him and left him insensible. They told him their object was to rid the country of Radical office holders. He know of other instances where the same purpose had been avowed. Subsequently through his efforts some thirty of the members of this band had been arrested and bound over for trial at Oxford, Miss. He is also School Director of his county, and testified that a number of schools had been broken up. These outrages had created great terror among the Republicans, who in that section were almost exclusively colored. In consequence of the secret vigorous action of the United States authorities, a better feeling prevails at present. As indication of the sentiment of the people, witness stated that when he first settled in that part of the country, being a Baptist, he applied for the ministership of the local church, but was refused unless he would confess her wrongs in fighting against the South. Afterwards he and his wife were invited to join, but concluded not to accept the invitation.

Gov. Pile, of New Mexico, under date of June 15th, states that he has been through the southern and southwestern portion of New Mexico for the purpose of investigating Indian affairs, and found the southwestern part of the Territory, especially along the line between New Mexico and Arizona, in a state of constant excitement on account of troubles between the Indians and citizens. Gov. Pile stopped a large party about to leave for Silver City for the purpose of attacking the Indians. But for his personal intervention there would probably have been a repetition of the Camp Grant massacre. The Governor recommends earnest efforts to get Cochise and his men to go on a reservation, and if they refuse a vigorous war should be waged against them.

Gen. Schofield writes that the Indians seem willing to work, and if the Government would furnish them with means of agriculture and stock raising they would soon become self-supporting. They complain of money being expended to build school houses and to pay teachers while they are starving.

Weather Report.

WASHINGTON, July 19.

The barometer has fallen since Tuesday evening at the Rocky Mountain stations, with a slight increase of temperature and southerly winds. The area of lowest pressure has passed from Lake Ontario southeast and is now central over Delaware. The barometer continues low on the gulf coasts, but has risen decidedly from Lake Ontario to Missouri and northwards. The temperature has fallen from the middle and east Atlantic, westward to Arkansas and Iowa. Fresh winds prevail in the Middle and Southern States from southwest and northwest on the lakes. Threatening and rainy weather has prevailed from the Ohio Valley to Lake Erie and to Florida, as also on the Atlantic coast. Clearing up weather is now reported from Lake Huron to Kentucky and westward.

Probabilities—It is probable that a short but heavy rain will pass over Maryland, New Jersey, and possibly Connecticut, but a rising barometer and clearing weather, with fresh northwestern winds are probable for Thursday from Illinois and Wisconsin, eastward to the Atlantic coast. Threatening weather will probably continue in northern Florida, with partially cloudy weather in the Interior and gulf States.

Thieves Arrested.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 19.

Detectives have arrested a German looking man, about thirty years old, and a young woman, nineteen years old, giving the names of E. Samuels and wife, for shoplifting. In their trunk was found about $1,000 worth of chains and rings, and burglars' tools, rolls of ribbon, velvet, and some fifty pawn tickets, issued by pawn brokers in Montreal, Indianapolis and Cincinnati.

Railroad Accident.

The fast train on the Central road, due here at 5 p. m., was thrown from the track about four miles west of this city, by the breaking of a rail, and all the coaches were somewhat injured, but not a passenger hurt, although the train was running at the rate of a mile a minute. A Wagner drawing-room car caught fire by the breaking of the gasoline tank. Fortunately, a steam fire engine from West Albany was near at hand, and saved the train from destruction.

Catholic Priest Arrested.

LEAVENWORTH, Ks., July 19.

A former priest of the Catholic Church, who gave his name as Father Westcamp, was arrested last evening in a house of infame for striking one of the female inmates. He has been representing himself at various places as a priest, and at other points as a Methodist minister. His pocket-book contained ministers' passes over railroads, also a letter from a Bishop suspending him until an investigation. He was brought before Judge Vaughan this morning and fined.

Thief Shot.

This evening James Kelley was caught stealing clothing from a line, and was shot down by the owner of the clothes line.

Tobacco Fair.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., July 19.

The attendance at the tobacco fair in this city to day is very large, and the sales will not be less than 1,000 hogsheads. Buyers from all parts are here in large numbers, and sales are more than triple those of the last anniversary sale.

From Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, July 19.

The Most Worthy Supreme Conclave of the Order of Heptasaph assembled this morning, Hon. James H. Young, of Maryland, Supreme Archon in the chair. Twenty-three officers and representatives were present. Maryland, Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, New York and the District of Columbia are represented. The report of the Archon was presented and shows a gratifying condition of the Order in the United States. During the year dispensations have been issued for three grand and nineteen subordinate bodies, not including charters granted by the Grand Conclaves and Grand Encampments. The report pays a high tribute to the prompt and faithful services of Supreme Secretary Baird S. Wolfe, of Maryland, whose report shows the great increase of the order during the year. Favorable reports from various Supreme Ephors in charge of jurisdictions were read. To-morrow a grand picnic will be given the body in Wood Park, so that the next session will occur on Friday.

L. Croningen and R. Ramsey, lottery commissioners in Covington, Kentucky, arrested for unlawfully drawing a lottery, waived examination to-day and were held in bail in the sum each $800, to await the action of the grand jury. The motion to dismiss the attachment under which the wheels, tubes and numbers used in drawing Kentucky lotteries were seized, was overuled. The impression prevails that the managers will devise means to proceed with their business, obnoxious as it is to many in the State, notwithstanding the proceedings commenced against them.

The weather is decidedly cool for the season.

Democratic Nominations.

BALTIMORE, July 19.

The Democratic State Convention for the nomination of candidates for Governor, Attorney General, and State Controller, met at 10 o'clock this morning at the new Assembly Room. Hon. Frederick Stone, of Charles county, presided. Hon. Wm. Pinkney White, of Baltimore, was nominated for Governor on the first ballot by a large majority. Hon. A. R. Sylvester, of Washington county, was nominated for Attorney General on the first ballot. Levi Woodford, of Somerset county, present incumbent, was renominated for Controller by acclamation. No committees on resolutions or platform were appointed by the convention and no resolutions of a political character were introduced. Mr. Nelson Frederick made a brief address, the State Central Committee was appointed, and the Convention adjourned sine die. It is understood the State Central Committee will issue an address to the electors of the State, embodying the platform.

The Gazette, the leading organ of the Democrats, in its issue this morning, says: It is to be hoped the Convention will confine itself exclusively to the nomination of candidates. The Democratic party of this State is harmonious and united. No pledges are necessary and a platform cannot make its position more firm, and any attempt on the contrary to force individuals to endorse explanations they cannot accept, will only have the effect of producing discord and weakness where we now have harmony and strength.

Severe Storm.

MEMPHIS, July 19.

The storm last night surpassed in fury anything witnessed here in years. The telegraph wires north were all prostrated, trees uprooted and vast damage done to the crops.

Railroad Accident.

The night express train on the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, bound to Chattanooga, run through a trestle washed away by the flood, near Grand Junction, killing the engineer and wounding twelve or fifteen passengers. Further particulars are anxiously looked for.

MEMPHIS, July 19.

An accident occurred to the eastern bound train on the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, about a mile east of Grand Junction, at daybreak this morning. The rain the night before washed away the trestle, and the engineer did not see it until too late to stop the train, and the engine, tender and baggage and two passenger cars fell into a ditch. The rear passenger cars became detached from the others and was not injured. The following is a list of the killed and wounded as far as heard from: Killed—George Gibbs, engineer; T. J. Montgomery, fireman. Wounded passengers—Willie, in cheek, severely; J. Tucker, leg broken; J. M. Atkins, slightly, Mr. and Mrs. Tucker and Lowdon Humes, cut about the head and face; James Dalson, arm fractured, and five or six others, names unknown.

Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Ky, July 19.

Arrangements are being made in this city to start a new afternoon paper, about the first of August. The parties interested in the project are well known as men of enterprise and successful business tact.

The Court of Appeals have granted to Matt. Shannahan, under sentence to be hanged, for the murder of Montgomery, sixty days time in which to show cause why a new trial should be granted. Shannahan was to have been hanged on the 15th of September.

Several days ago, Miss Mattie Johnson was wounded in her foot with a piece of glass. To-day lockjaw set in, and she is now dying in convulsions.

Temperance.

NEWARK, July 19.

At the State Temperance Alliance meeting this afternoon over seven hundred dollars were raised for the benefit of the association. The Executive Committee was instructed to take steps toward starting a daily paper under the auspices of the Alliance, and two thousand dollars were pledged for the purpose. The mass meeting to-night was largely attended. Addresses were delivered advocating local prohibitory laws, to be decided by ballot.

Suicide.

CAIRO, July 19.

Dr. W. R. Burke, who poisoned himself in the poor house last night, was once a wealthy and popular practicing physician in this city. He became addicted to dissipation a few years since and lost all his property. His wife became insane and is now an inmate of the Jacksonville asylum. He was originally from Virginia, where his relatives now live.

Sentenced to be Hung.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y, July 19.

The jury in the Buckhart trial after remaining out all night, came into court this morning, and rendered a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, with a recommendation to mercy. After some time spent in deliberations, the court sentenced the prisoner to be hanged on Friday, the first of September next.

Boston Delegation.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.

A Boston delegation, consisting of Mayor Gaston and members of the City Council, arrived here to-day and were received by a subcommittee of the Centennial Committee of the Council and were conveyed to the Continental Hotel, where they partook of an entertainment. This afternoon they will be formally welcomed by Mayor Fox.

Suicide.

ALBANY, N.Y, July 19.

Joseph Hagadon, clerk for Tillinghast & Co., being detected to-day in appropriating his employer's money, attempted to shoot himself, but the ball lodged in a large pocket book. He then threw himself from the window into the street, striking upon his head. He was picked up insensible, and will probably die. He had hitherto borne an excellent reputation.

Low Water.

OMAHA, July 19.

News from Fort Benton reports the steamboat Silver Lake at Cow Island unable to get further up on account of low water. She has a large number of passengers on board. There are from four to five more boats on the way up, of which is thought the Miner and Ackleyonly will be able to get over the rapids.

St. Thomas.

ST. THOMAS, July 14.

The steamer Virginia has returned to the Island of Trinidad, having been unable to land her expedition in Cuba. The Spanish war-steamer Tornado, at Porto Cabello, will probably go to Trinidad.

The steamer Columbia, from Glasgow, arrived.

State House Bill Defeated.

HARTFORD, CONN, July 19.

In the House to-day a resolution appropriating $500,000 for a new State House in New Haven was defeated by a vote of 83 to 19.

PETROLEUM MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE MORNING HERALD,
TITUSVILLE, July 19, 1871—9 P. M.

The petroleum market to-day was dull, with very few transactions. Buyers were holding off in anticipation of lower prices, and sellers were unwilling to part with their oil at ruling rates. Spot was offered in Oil City during the morning at $5 05, without takers, and later in the day it could be bought at $5.00. One thousand dollars was paid for the privilege of placing 5,000 bbls on the Upper Road, at $1.55 any time during the current year.

We quote the following sales:

Money and Stock Market.

NEW YORK, July 19.

Gold is dull but steady, at 112¾@112¾.

Loans were made at 1 per cent for carrying, and late in the day 1-32 of 1 per cent was paid for the use of small lots.

Clearances, $17,500,000.

Governments are steady, and a fraction higher on the 5-20 issues of January or July. The Treasury to-day did not accept one million bonds, as at first reported, but accepted only 385,000 of 5-20s at 112 35-100 to 112 37-100. The reason for not accepting the million advertised for, was that they were not offered at or under par in gold. The remaining 615,000 could have been bought between 112 37-100 and 112 20-100.

Stocks are active and feverish, and the whole list sympathized more or less in the decline caused by the disagreement between the St. Paul and Northwestern companies. Toward the close Union Pacific suddenly broke down 1½ per cent, which caused a general decline in the prices of all speculative shares. At the close the market went down to the lowest point of the day. The bears are selling everything regardless of values, and may succeed in hammering the prices still lower. As the market has been largely oversold, prices must react when they attempt to recover their shorts.

Money abundant at 2@3 per cent.

State bonds are dull, excepting Tennessee, Missouri and Georgia 7s, which have been strong and active.

STREET PAVEMENTS AND SEWERS.—In the Common Council last evening the Street Committee were instructed to advertise for proposals for constructing sewers and laying block pavement in Franklin street, from Pine street to the railroad. The property holders on this street are nearly unanimous in favor of these improvements, and we are glad the Council have decided to go ahead. We also learn that two-thirds of the property holders on Washington street, from the corner of Spring street, are in favor of making the same improvements without delay.

THE RAILROAD TO MEADVILLE.—The preliminary survey to the railroad from Meadville to Titusville was made by Mr. Charles G. Wheeler, a civil engineer of Victor, N. Y., of large experience and practised judgment in running railroad lines. The route passes through a fine farming country at the west end, and a heavy timbered district in the eastern section, consisting of pine, hemlock, black ash, maple, chestnut, and some oak. The only bridging of any importance is over French Creek, near Meadville, and over Oil Creek. The line would cross the head waters of the Woodcock, Sugar and Muddy Creeks. There are now some four saw mills on Muddy Creek, near Townville, and several steam mills and a large number of saw mills scattered through this comparative wilderness. The townships through which the proposed route lies are Mead, Randolph, Troy, Steuben, touching at Sugar Lake postoffice, in Randolph, and also at Townville. The route of the proposed extension of this road west of Meadville to Espyville will be through Vernon, Sadsbury, Pine, North Shenango, touching at Evansburg, and Shermansville. The distance from Espyville to Meadville is 21 miles. The distance from Meadville to Tryonville 26 miles, and 7 miles further to Titusville. The distance to Meadville from this place by way of Union, is 54½ miles, making a saving of a distance of about 22 miles from this point to Meadville, an important item in freight and travel. The grade also is only 50 feet to the mile by the new route, another great advantage in transportation and locomotion.

M. H. FENNO, late Lieutenant Company L, 12th Pennsylvania cavalry, can hear of something to his advantage by calling at the Titusville postoffice.

TRAINS passing over the bridge at Pioneer are compelled to go very slow, as the centre of the bridge is only supported by temporary stays or props. The work on the centre pier is being pushed forward with despatch, and will soon be completed.

THE Associated Artists' Minstrels gave one of their entertaining performances at Bascom's Hall, Oil City, last evening. The above troupe is one of the best now traveling, and comprises some of the oldest and best performers in the business. Jake Talbot, J. S. Edwards and Dick Parker, the managers, are well known and popular commedians, and are a host in themselves. They appear at our Opera House on Saturday evening.

A MAN named James Greaves, who lives at Conneautville, Pa., but who has been employed at Oil City on the Baptist Church, fell from a scaffolding of the building on Tuesday, causing a fracture of the collar bone and receiving a deep cut in his side from the sharp point of a board. His wounds were dressed by Dr. C. D. Thompson, and he is now doing well.

THE old Cresswell well, situated near the creek on the east side of the railroad at Tarr Farm, which was cleaned out about two months ago, is to be abandoned. Two torpedoes were exploded in it, but it has yielded nothing but water. Six or seven years ago this well flowed four hundred barrels per day. The Phillips well, which, at one time, was the largest producing well in the region, having flowed three thousand two hundred barrels per day, is close by the Cresswell well, on the bank of the creek. It is now owned by Lookhart & Frew, and is pumping steadily from eight to ten barrels per day.

G. A. R.—The grand encampment, Department of New York, convenes at Geneva, N. Y., on the 19th inst. General Ambrose Burnside, Grand Commander of the G. A. R., U. S. A., and full staff, will be present, and Governor Geary and General A. R. Calhoun, of the Department of Pennsylvania, and staff, also with many other of their comrades of the field. The 19th inst., will be for business reports and instructions in the new ritualistic work. On the 20th seven steamers are placed at the service of the G. A. R., for a grand excursion to Watkins, Glen and other ports on the lakes.

FACT, FACT.—The fact is too well known to need comment, that Dr. Sibbet restores lost hair and cures all forms of scalp and skin diseases. He can be seen at the Mansion House. Hours from 2 to 8 p. m. Best of city references given.

IF the weather is favorable to-day there will be nice fishing at Long Branch, Kelley's Grove. If the picnic adjourns to St. Joseph Hall, there will still be "fish to fry" there.

THE race which was to have come off yesterday at the Driving Park, has been postponed indefinitely on account of the weather. We will give due notice of the day.

Editors Morning Herald:

Seeing the article in the HERALD headed "Honor to Whom Honor is Due," by Spectator, I would like to say a few words about our noble firemen. Being at the scene of the late fire at the first alarm, I had a chance to see to whom the honor was due, I would say that if any company in the department needed praise it was the Eagle Hose. Though they are a company of boys, they are always the first to the scene of danger, and at the late fire they stood their ground like old and tried firemen. And in conclusion, I would say too much praise cannot be given to the fire department of our city. CITIZEN.

LOSS AT THE LATE VAN SYCKEL REFINERY FIRE.—The loss at the Van Syckel refinery fire last Monday, was not so great as at first supposed. The total loss will not exceed $4,500, upon which there is $1,900 insurance. Mr. Van Syckel owns three-fourths interest in the refinery, and he has made it pay better than any works of the size in the country. He, however, feels very sore over the succession of mysterious fires which have so often and so ruinously devastated his premises, and thinks there is no use starting up again until certain matters under litigation are definitely settled. This is the ninth fire which has occurred in the works since they were built, in 1868.

DENIER had a fine audience at his Theatre last evening. The performance was very entertaining. Mr. Kelly, in his act entitled "Mrs. McGee's Hotel House," is deserving special mention. He is an excellent dancer, and the marvelous rapidity with which he moves his feet, and the precision of his time, is truly wonderful. The entertainment is varied, including songs, dances, farces, negro delineations, &c. "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with five new scenes, will be presented to-night and also to-morrow; also at the Matinee Saturday. At 7½ o'clock Saturday evening Miss Tillie Antonio will make an ascension on the tight rope.

THE Common Council of Buffalo recently sent out a committee of investigation concerning pavements. They were joined by a large number of private citizens and visited the principal Eastern cities, arriving in Gotham in time to put down the Hibernian riot. The committee have returned, but have not yet presented their report. They intend to recommend the best pavement yet invented, and we shall look for their report with some interest and impatience.

THE dangerous practice so generally epedemic among the street gamins of catching rides upon railroad trains, resulted in the death of a lad at Corry on Monday last. He lost his hold of the platform railing, swung under the wheels and was fearfully mangled.

THE new Oil Exchange at Oil City, which is located in Mrs. Sands' block on the railroad near the depot, will be ready for occupancy in about a week. The Atlantic & Pacific and Western Union Telegraph offices will have rooms on either side of the entrance in front. The painters are putting on the finishing touches to the interior, which has a commodious and pleasant appearance, and will be a decided improvement on the dingy and cheerless rooms now used by the Exchange.

CUPID'S RETRIBUTION.

Cupid in a wanton mood,
Wearied out with too much leisure,
Taking bow, and arrows good,
Sallied forth in quest of pleasure;
All Olympus watched the boy,
Soaring from the sacred hill,
And mutely wondered, what the joy
Could tempt his flight to Titusville.

But down he came, and roving round,
In quest of hearts for wooing,
The impish urchin quickly found
This was no place for cooing;
Though gentle hearts did here abound,
To promise a feast of glee,
But that love's tone, did ne'er resound,
Did the urchin quickly see.

At length a beauteous face he spies,
With innocence impressed,
And quick his shaft, to string applies
To pierce the maiden's breast;
Yet he feared the venture,—here
No smile of welcome greeting,
And in a mood 'twixt hope and fear,
He stood awhile debating.

And Prudence whispered, "If you do,
And if you miss," she said,
"What earthly power can save you
From the vengeance of the maid.'"
Then he wish'd, and then he would,
And then he feared to draw,
Then uttered all Olympus, rude,—
As they the dilemma saw.

His pride is piqued, and now he will,
Whatever may him betide,
But under circumstances, still
He kept on Prudence's side.
Behind a derrick's lofty beam,
He close for shelter drew;
He took a quiek and deadly aim,
And swift his arrow flew.

Alas! poor Cupid! wretched child,
The luckless shaft glanced by,
And filled with wrath, with anger wild,
Flings terror from "the maiden's" eye.
The luckless god she fiercely seized,—
No tears her rage can foil—
The shrieking boy aloft she raised,
And soused him in the oil.

His mother shrieked in terror wild,
And all Olympus trembled;
And quick to aid her darling child;
Was all the gods assembled.
"Great Mars," she said, "to thee I give,
To execute my will;
Let no foul creature yonder live—
Leave not a soul in Titusville."

"Peace!" said Jove! "they all comply,
Mercury, go and fetch the boy;
Esculapius, you attend his cage,
And purge him of this foul disgrace;
Cleanse his pinions, all stains erase
Contracted in that horrid place.
And, now! gods of heaven attend
And all earth listen, while I send
A curse upon this wicked sod,
That dared to desecrate a god."

And lifting high his sceptered hand,
He sent this curse upon the land:
"Let woman there have extra sway,
To enforce capricious whim!—away,
Forever let dear love remain,
Nor ever light her charms again;
Let maiden's lightsome form of grace,
To unsightly, spiritless flesh give place,
That yields not charm of womanly pride,
To ornament a husband's side"
The mighty scepter lowered then,
Whilst all th' assembly said, "Amen!"

Running Wells on Sunday.

CHURCH RUN, July 19.

Editors Morning Herald:

I have thought about the Sunday question in relation to running oil wells on that day; and read your article a fortnight ago, and have been waiting to hear the views you promised from "an old operator," but they are not forthcoming. Now, I'm an old operator myself, but it seems to me ridiculous to pretend that it would not be very injurious, indeed, to let wells stand still on Sundays, or one day in the week.

The wells that pump "by heads," might be shut down Sundays. Perhaps, two out of ten on Church Run, for instance, are pumped "by heads." The reason is that wells that are pumped "by heads" are old wells, and the crevices are all cleaned out. But with new wells, the pumping must not be suspended, and Sunday cannot be excepted. In a new well there is always a large quantity of B. S. oil, which clogs up the crevices and the valves in the working barrel. When a well is shut down, the sediment, a white limy substance, collects on and adheres to the valve, and this causes great delay and makes it necessary to hoist the sucker rods to clean the valves.

Then again, when a well is shut down, water accumulates, and much time must be spent in exhausting it before oil is produced. Sometimes the sediment is so thick, in consequence of the stopping of a well, that the tubing has to be drawn to clear the working barrels and valves. For these reasons, it is not practicable to shut a new well down on Sunday without great injury or loss. At least, such is my experience. Respectfully yours,

ENGINEER AND DRILLER

THE Tidioute Journal says: "The most surprising thing in oil development is the resuscitation of Triumph Hill. The territory was considered exhausted, and was abandoned some four years ago. At that time the wells were drilled into the third sand some fourteen or fifteen feet, the operators being afraid to go deeper lest they should strike an inexhaustible supply of salt water. But this spring some parties, having a theory that there was still oil in paying quantities on the hill, drilled deeper, going sixty or sixty-five feet into the rock, and using torpedoes, and in every instance, so far, have succeeded in getting paying wells out of the old holes. Others went down along the Titusville road and put down wells, and every well is a success, some going as high as fifty barrels per day. Now, Triumph is producing 600 barrels per day, where six months ago not ten barrels were produced, and new strikes daily are adding to the production."

JUMPING.—It will be seen by reference to our advertising columns that there will be a jumping match next Saturday at the Driving Park between a picked five from Union City and Centreville. Mr. Bob Way, a champion, will give an exhibition of his remarkable ability for jumping.

Loring's, of Boston.

"Loring's" is about as much of a household word in Boston as "The Common." On the corner of Washington street and Broomfield street, in the heart of the city, is Loring's, and there is always a procession of people going in or coming out. Loring's circulating library draws all classes of persons, and every magazine or periodical of the day can be found on his counters or shelves. Loring's publishing house has recently made quite a hit by George MacDonald's great novels. MacDonald is considered by many critics as the greatest of living story-writers since the death of Dickens. The London Times says of one of his stories that in it "we stood with one foot in fairy land and one on common earth." It seems to be the literary mission of MacDonald to give fresh views of Scriptura. The great Dr. Guthrie in his Sunday Magazine says of him: "In George MacDonald's company the very air seems impregnated with love, purity, and tenderness. We seem to be under an Italian sky; and the harshness, whether of individual or national temperament, is wonderfully checked. A loving heart reveals to us the heart which is the fountain of love, and sends us away ashamed of our harsh and bitter feelings, and praying to be able to love more both Him who is love, and those who ought ever to be dear to us for his sake."

The list is a long one, all masterly, but in the opinion of many, Robert Falconer is the masterpiece.

Loring has done a good work in issuing in a cheap form, short, practical treatises on the farm, garden, the cultivation of small grounds and the embellishment of modest homesteads. These little books, in paper covers, containing not more than 125 pages each, and costing only from 25 cts. to 35 cts., are a mine of useful hints and directions. And being strung or wove on the thread of capital stories, and in the form of a dialogue, the interest is kept up to the end of the chapter. These little books richly merit the extensive sale they have had, and there is no question but they have given a decided impulse to a more thrifty husbandry and a garden bloom to hundreds and thousands of suburban places all over the country.

In the list, we name the following as being among the most useful and charming, viz: The Strawberry Garden, how it was planted, what it cost, what came of it, financially and sentimentally; A Simple Flower Garden for Country Homes, a practical guide for any lady, how to start it, what it will cost, how to stock it to have flowers the year round; "My Ten Rod Farm, or How I Become a Florist;" Farming by Inches, or with Brains, Sir. These publications can be had or ordered from Howe's, or any book store.

Anchor Life Insurance Company.

This is a comparatively new but important candidate for public favor. It is now working upon its third year, and but few, if any, companies have made a more substantial growth. Mr. E. C. Fisher, the president of the company, has served twenty years in the business, and has learned what are the principal hindrances to life insurance, and to overcome the objections of many, has embodied the following special features in the Anchor Life:

1st. It guarantees Policy Holders a definite cash surrender value, and endorses the same in plain figures on every policy.

2d. It guarantees the Policy Holder his dividends, even if the policy should lapse.

3d. It also guarantees that if the Policy Holder desires to continue his policy in force, the same shall not be forfeited by non-payment of premium until the dividends are entirely consumed in continuing the same in force.

4th. It gives thirty days' grace in payment of premiums, and the policy is held good during that time.

5th. It makes itself practically a home company, by guaranteeing to loan through local boards of trustees appointed for that purpose, such proportion of the company's net assets as may be secure therefrom; and for this purpose, and the better protection of the company in making future loans, a strong local board of trustees is now organized in this city, composed of the following well-known gentlemen: Wm. H. Abbott, Henry Hinkley, Fred Bates, I. G. Jackson, F. W. Andrews, D. H. Cady, L. H. Smith, H. B Porter, John D. Archbold, F. B. Guthrie, John Dilligham and J. C. Bryan. These gentlemen form the "local board," and have organized by selecting W. H. Abbott as President, I. G. Jackson, Treasurer, and G. W. Hunt, Secretary and Manager. Mr. Hunt will enter upon his duties at once. Those who contemplate taking out life insurance policies should carefully study the plans of the "Anchor Life."

A DEFENSE OF DOGS.—The annual outcry of the newspapers against the canine population has commenced in most of the larger cities, but in Philadelphia the poor creatures have found an earnest and spirited defendant in the person of Caroline E. White, who subscribes herself President of the Women's Branch of Pennsylvania for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. She says that this periodical assault upon dogs from fear of hydrophobia is the result of an unjust and cruel prejudice; and she quotes the highest medical authorities of the European schools to show that,

First—Hydrophobia is a disease of very rare occurrence. Second—It is more common in winter than in summer. Third—The use of the muzzle is calculated to induce hydrophobia. Ten lecture delivered on this subject in Balt more, last summer, a gentleman who had, no doubt, devoted much time and attention to the study of this disease, reports the above-mentioned facts, and adds: "Fits are a certain sign that hydrophobia does not exist in the animal suffering from them." In a conference with S. Weir Mitchell, M. D., he affirmed it to be the result of all investigations that hydrophobia was more likely to occur in winter than in summer. Now with regard to the first statement of the convention of physicians in France, that hydrophobia is very rarely met with, we have abundant facts in our own experience to support that theory. The late president of the gentleman's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, S. Morris Wain, examined the books of the Pennsylvania Hospital from the time of its foundation, about ninety years ago, to the present time, and in the record of maladies which had existed there, found one case of hydrophobia.

Mr. White accordingly exhorts the dog catchers and dog killers of Philadelphia to suspend their crusade, that it may no longer be said the streets of the "Quaker City" are a hunting ground for these humble devoted, friends of man, and that they are only seen to be made the target for the policeman's pistol.

THE PETROLEUM TRADE.—During the past week nine vessels cleared from the port of Philadelphia for foreign ports with 1,417,007 gallons refined petroleum. There are now loading seven ships, eleven barks, four brigs and one schooner. A statement of the number of gallons shipped since the 1st of January, as compared with the same period last year, is published, which shows a total of 22,777,338 this year, against 23,116,068.

WATERMELONS, cantelopes, egg-plants, plums, peaches, pears, apples, pineapples and all kinds of fruit and vegetables received daily at Shanks.

Interesting Litigation.

LIABILITY OF INSURANCE COMPANIES TO OIL REFINERS.

The following curious point of law is now under litigation between an Oil Refining Company and a Fire Insurance Company, the decision of which will be of importance to the entire refining interest. It appears that:

"The policy of insurance covering the distillate tank was taken out on the capacity of the tank, and as such it necessarily included any quantity of oil that might run into it from the crude oil still and be therein burned during the progress of the fire until the capacity of the tank had been filled, after which any oil consumed by the fire became a dead loss to the owner. This position seems so clear as to be beyond the possibility of dispute, and yet the insurance company in question is not willing to concede the refiners' claim in the matter. When the fire broke out there was comparatively little oil in the distillate tank, and what was there was deemed to be not in any great danger. The fire occurred under a crude oil still; and the crude oil that ran down upon the furnace so augmented the heat from the coal fire as to make the still work with extraordinary force, and to run refined oil in the distillate tank in a very large volume. So long as the distillate tank did not ignite, this fact was the cause of saving a large quantity of refined oil, but immediately the latter did ignite it became the cause of additional loss to an responsible party, for the reason that refined is worth more than crude oil. Finally, despite all exertions to save it, the distillate tank did ignite; and the fire in and around it was so furious as to render it impossible for any one to turn the stop that let the refined oil from the still into the tank where it was consumed. In consequence of burning and overflowing, more refined oil was lost in and through the distillate tank than it could contain. On account of the difficulty of determining exactly how much refined oil there was in the distillate tank, the owners thereof, although positive that they lost through the burning of this tank more oil than it would hold (in consequence of combined burning and overflowing), are willing to settle their claim for loss by fire in the distillate tank on a basis that allows less oil than that which would fill the capacity of the tank to have been destroyed. This basis the insurance company refuses to accept, and the case is still the subject of dispute.

Parker's Landing.

From the Forest Press.

The Parker region is somewhat different from other sections where oil is found. In your "upper regions" the oil belts are narrow and of uncertain, length, while here the belts are wide and clearly defined. There are numbers of them, all running parallel with each other, and extending over a wide area of country. From Armstrong Run on the south to six miles up Clarion river, oil has been found in continuous belts. It is impossible to determine how much farther these will run in that direction, until that section is more fully developed; but we shall not be amazed if the eastern portion of your country shall be included in these belts, and yet prove more productive than your western portion. We do not state this to tickle the ears of parties owning real estate in that vicinity but merely note what seems to be the general impression among men familiar with the business.

This territory is more certain than any than we have yet seen. If an operator exercises merely common "horse sense" in regard to the location of his well, he can feel reasonably sure of a paying well. Although the wells in the upper oil regions start up with a greater "splurge" than wells in this section, to use a phrase, these have more "stick-to-ativeness." They pay more money, they leave more collateral when they demise than the former.

Nearly all the prominent operators here have come from "up country," Titusville being more numerously represented in money and men than any other locality. They clearly have an eye to business in that thrifty and wealthy little city. In our next we may possibly name some of these fortunate operators, and the unfortunate ones we shall not name, but let their portraits be "done in oil," which will preserve their name to future posterity.

THE MAGNETIC SPRINGS OF MIDLAND CITY (MICH.)—These mineral springs have acquired a good deal of celebrity of late for their medicinal virtues and curative properties, especially in cases of paralysis. The many friends of Mr. Watson Goodrich, of Centreville, a brother-in-law of William Barnsdall, of this city, will be glad to learn that he is deriving considerable benefit from the use of those waters. The following report of the case we find in the Midland (Mich) Independent:

Perhaps no other case which has been treated presents a more striking proof of the efficacy of the waters of this well, than that of Mr. Goodrich, of Pennsylvania. His is a case of a certain kind of paralysis. He came to Midland, with no faith in the virtue of the mineral water, but ready and willing to try any remedy that might possibly prove of any benefit. His symptoms were a partial paralysis of the arms and limbs by a painful prickling sensation in all parts of his body. The pain was increased when he allowed his hands to hang by his side, so that he was obliged almost continually to carry them supported at his breast. He has now been using the water of the well for about two weeks, and no great has been the benefit already received, that he is entirely relieved from his sufferings, is able to walk freely and well, and pronounces himself almost a new man.

Intelligent individuals who are acquainted with both cases say that the symptoms of Mr. Goodrich were very similar to those of Chief Justice Chase, who has now spent a month at St. Louis, and yet, according to the Herald and other observers, and the testimony of the gentleman himself, has received no perceptible benefit.

In this class of cases as well as all diseases of the liver, kidneys and digestive organs, the medicinal properties of this water have proved themselves specially applicable, and no person yet treated has failed to receive marked benefit.

OUR FAIR.—As the Crawford County Agricultural Society is a home institution of which every resident of Western Crawford is justly proud, we feel that no apology is necessary for taking up a goodly portion of the outside of our issue to-day in the publication of the premium list, etc., to be awarded at the annual fair to be held in this place on the 4th, 5th, and 6th days of October next. The premium list has been given a thorough revision and a large number of additions made, it being the intention of the Executive Committee to offer prizes for all articles upon which there would be any competition. Although yet too early to venture any conclusions as to the success of the exhibition, we can say that if we do not have a fair even better than the many good ones which have preceded it, the fault will lie with the exhibitors, as the officers will do their part to see that there is no failure. The premium list will be issued in a pamphlet form as usual, and due notice will be given when they are ready for distribution.—Conneautville Record.

The Walton Club, of Titusville, has purchased one of the Thousand Islands, nearly opposite Alexandria Bay, upon which is to be erected a commodious club house for the use of the sporting fraternity of that lively burg. The island contains two and a half acres, its bold bluffs being prettily wooded, with an outlook from the summit of charming loveliness. Any one who has had the good fortune to pass through these islands will heartily endorse the good caste displayed in the selection of such an attractive retreat for the purpose to which it is to be put. Quite a number of these islands are now owned by private parties, and many of them are crowned with elegantly built summer resorts.—Erie Dispatch.

Titusville Morning Herald.

Agricultural.

Hearth and Home is a fine illustrated journal with a variety of reading matter, all of which is fresh and readable. It is just such a paper as every family ought to take. It contains, among other things, a considerable amount of information on rural affairs. We annex the following paragraphs:

THE USES OF THE CURRY COMB.—There is no better nor more profitable exercise for any one who owns a horse, cow or ox, than for fifteen minutes each day, summer as well as winter, to use a curry-comb on his animal. The general idea of this ingenious implement is that it is a good thing wherewith to rub off dirt or filth that may adhere to the hide while the beast is in the stable, but when out on pasture, there is no further need for it. Here lies a grand mistake. When one realizes the condition of the skin of a horse or cow during the hot weather, when it has been time after time reeking with sweat that has dried on it, until a thick coat of scurf has collected under the hair and formed a crust which irritates and annoys the poor animals excessively, he will easily imagine the comfort derived from a regular course of currying. Comfort is vastly conducive to health, and health is the measure of the value of an animal to its owner; then it must follow that the curry-comb cannot profitably be idle during the summer months any more than during the winter.

HORSE FLIES.—W. A. J. Luzerne county, Pa., asks how he can prevent flies from biting his horses and cattle. These flies annoy his cattle mostly about the legs, and cause them to stamp and jerk their legs, and at milking time trouble his cows seriously. We have tried many plans to circumvent the flies, and never yet succeeded to our wish. We found carbolic soap-suds washed on to the horses and allowed to dry on the skin very effective, but not lasting; a few hours would be sufficient for the acid to evaporate. Finally we procured a cotton sheet large enough to cover the horse, and fitted it with a strap to fasten around the neck, and this protected the body of the horse. The legs we protected with pieces of cotton procured from the domestic rag-bag, long enough to reach from above the knees to the pastern, and wide enough to lap round the leg. These we soaked in tar and wound them loosely round the horses' and cows' legs, and fastened them on loosely. The flies could not penetrate this, and there was no more kicking or stamping in the stable at night.

SHADE FOR CHICKENS.—The wild jungle fowl, the parent of the domesticated races, lives in shady forests and thickets; hence our tame fowl inherit a liking for shrubbery and hedgerows. They desire a shelter from the winds, which are too cold for them at some seasons, and ruffle their feathers uncomfortably for them during all. So averse are they also from straying far from cover in case of the attacks of hawks, that only hunger and an inviting forage ground will tempt them out in the middle of a large open field. But there is one other use of trees and bushes for poultry that has not been enough insisted on; we mean shade for young chickens during very hot weather. When fowls are mature, or half-grown, they are strong and able to resist extremes of temperature. But chickens of but a few weeks old are feeble, and their resources are severely enough taxed to meet the demands of their increasing growth without their being oppressed by fierce heat. Many die every summer for lack of shade. If the coops cannot be conveniently placed under trees, then a few boards, empty boxes, or something of the kind, should be propped up in a number of places near by, and the chicks will soon show how well they appreciate such provisions for their comfort.

Miscellaneous.

The Episcopalian says: "Much of the leisure time which clerks and other employes have on their hands on these half-holidays runs into base ball and other outdoor pastimes to such an extent as to be looked upon now as an exciting business, rather than a healthful, recreating pleasure. It must have regularly organized clubs, with presidents, secretaries, treasurers, etc., doing thus pretty much the same sort of work which the half-holiday was given them to be free from."

The famous "Passion Play" in Oberammergau began on Saturday, the 24th of June, and was to be continued throughout the following week. A very great number of strangers were on the ground, principally Americans and Britons, and we may therefore expect fifty or more accounts of it in the English and American papers "from Our Own Correspondent."

A new-made minister having occasion to marry a couple at his first official act, and there being quite an assemblage present, he determined to strike them dumb with awe, and so in winding up he said, "I pronounce you man and wife, and the Lord have mercy on your sinful souls!"

Says the New York Globe: "A captain of a base ball nine, and foreman of an engine company, the Rev Samuel Scoville, of Norwich, this State, will supply Mr. Beecher's pulpit while he is rusticating at Peekskill. Mr. Scoville is described as a rising, young, muscular Christian of great promise. We hope he is as good at the pulpit as he is at the bat."

The "home-coming" of the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise, at Inverary Castle, has been fixed for the month of August, when the Queen will honor the Duke of Argyle with a visit, and there will be "high jinks" in the Highlands.

is prepared now to receive orders for, and execute the same in the best and finest style of the age, anything in the line of PAINTING, such as

House, Sign, Carriage, Ornamental and Fresco Painting,

Graining, Paper Hanging, Decorative or Plain.

I have had the experience of years in the business, and am a PRACTICAL WORKMAN. This, together with the fact that I have in my employ the very best artists in the several branches, enumerated above that can be found, must be a Guarantee of Good Work.

I have secured the services of

MR. C. S. SMITH,

late of Philadelphia, who is a good practical decorator and fresco painter, and has proven himself master of his art, and has with him and carries the BEST OF REFERENCES from many different parts of the United States,

MR. T. U. FINCK,

my GRAINER, needs no commending, for his work tells wherever he works. I claim that with my experience and employed talent, that I can give entire satisfaction in every part of the business, and do work as cheap as any other establishment of the kind in the county, or even better and cheaper considering the quality of my work, then any foreign talent that is in our midst. Now all, or any one that has anything in my line to do that will give me a chance, I will prove to their entire satisfaction that I can and will do any part or all that I assert herein, and even more.
